

INSPIRING DESIGN IDEAS AND BARNDOMINIUM LAYOUTS

The journey of a thousand miles begins with one step.
- Lao Tzu

Barndominiums are typically open designs, so they can be custom-tailored exactly to what you want. Regardless of your style or needs, this can be a perfect option for your home build.

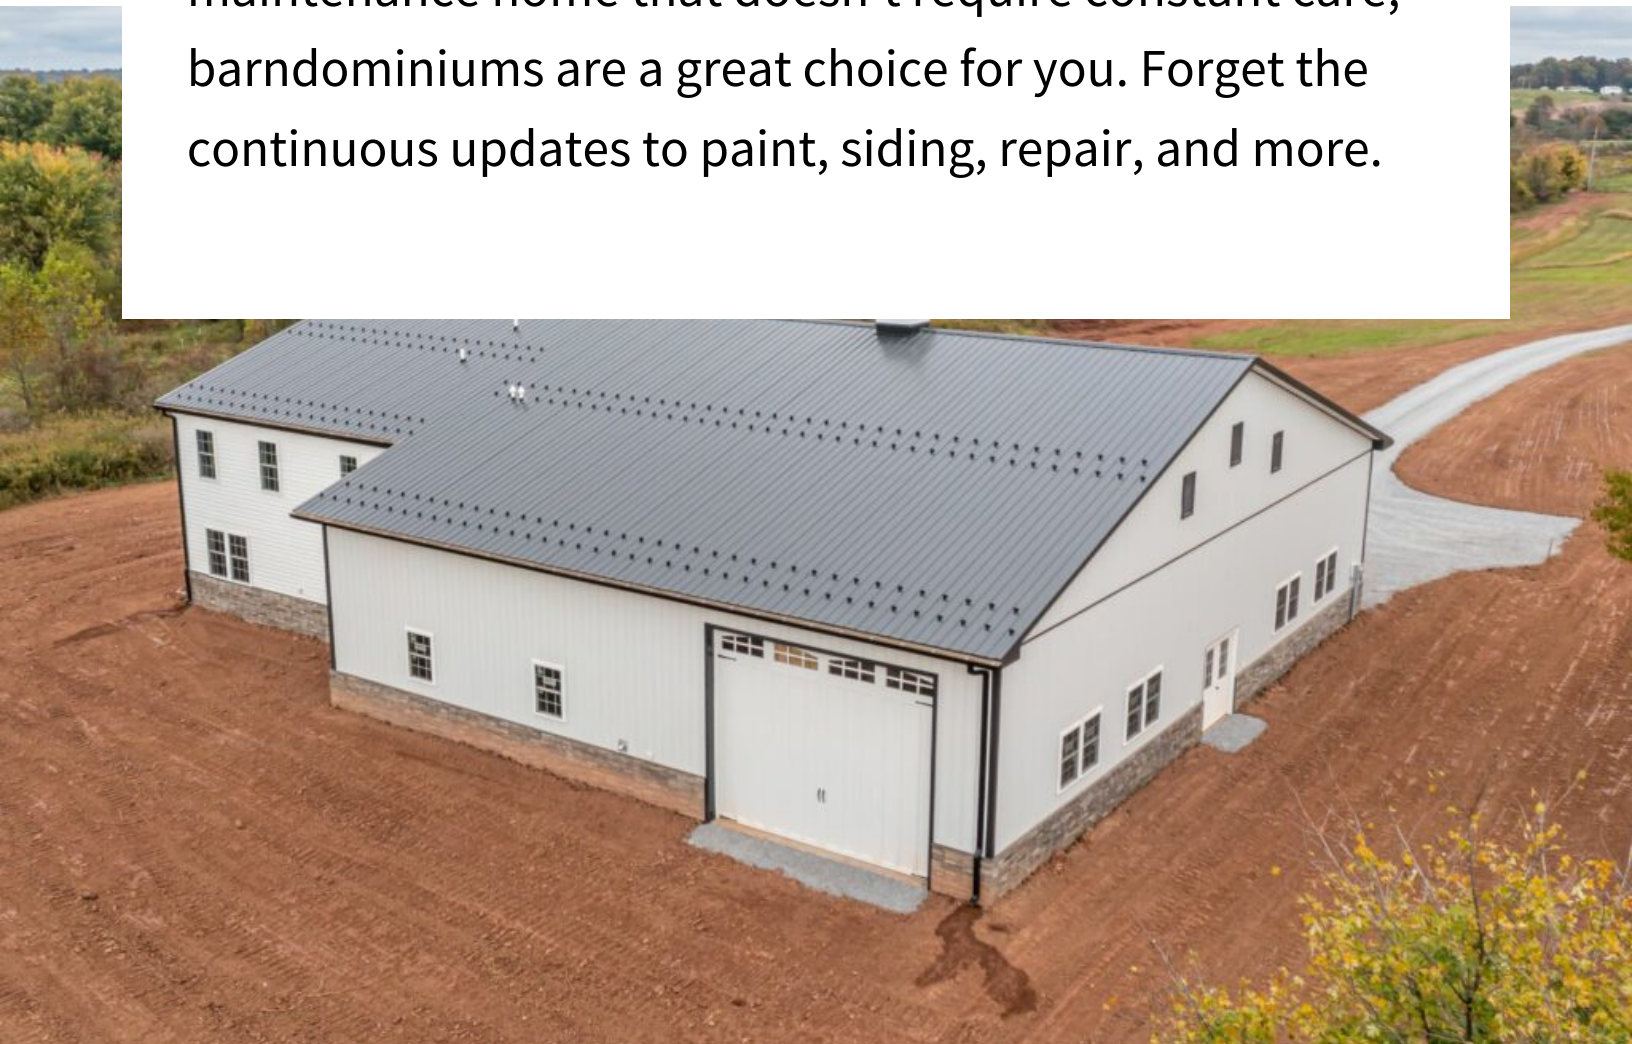

It can take a long time for a custom home to be built – as long as years between finding land, working with a builder, and actually getting all of the construction completed. However, a barndominium comes with a rather quick building process, so you'll be able to stick to a quicker timeline and move in without a long wait.

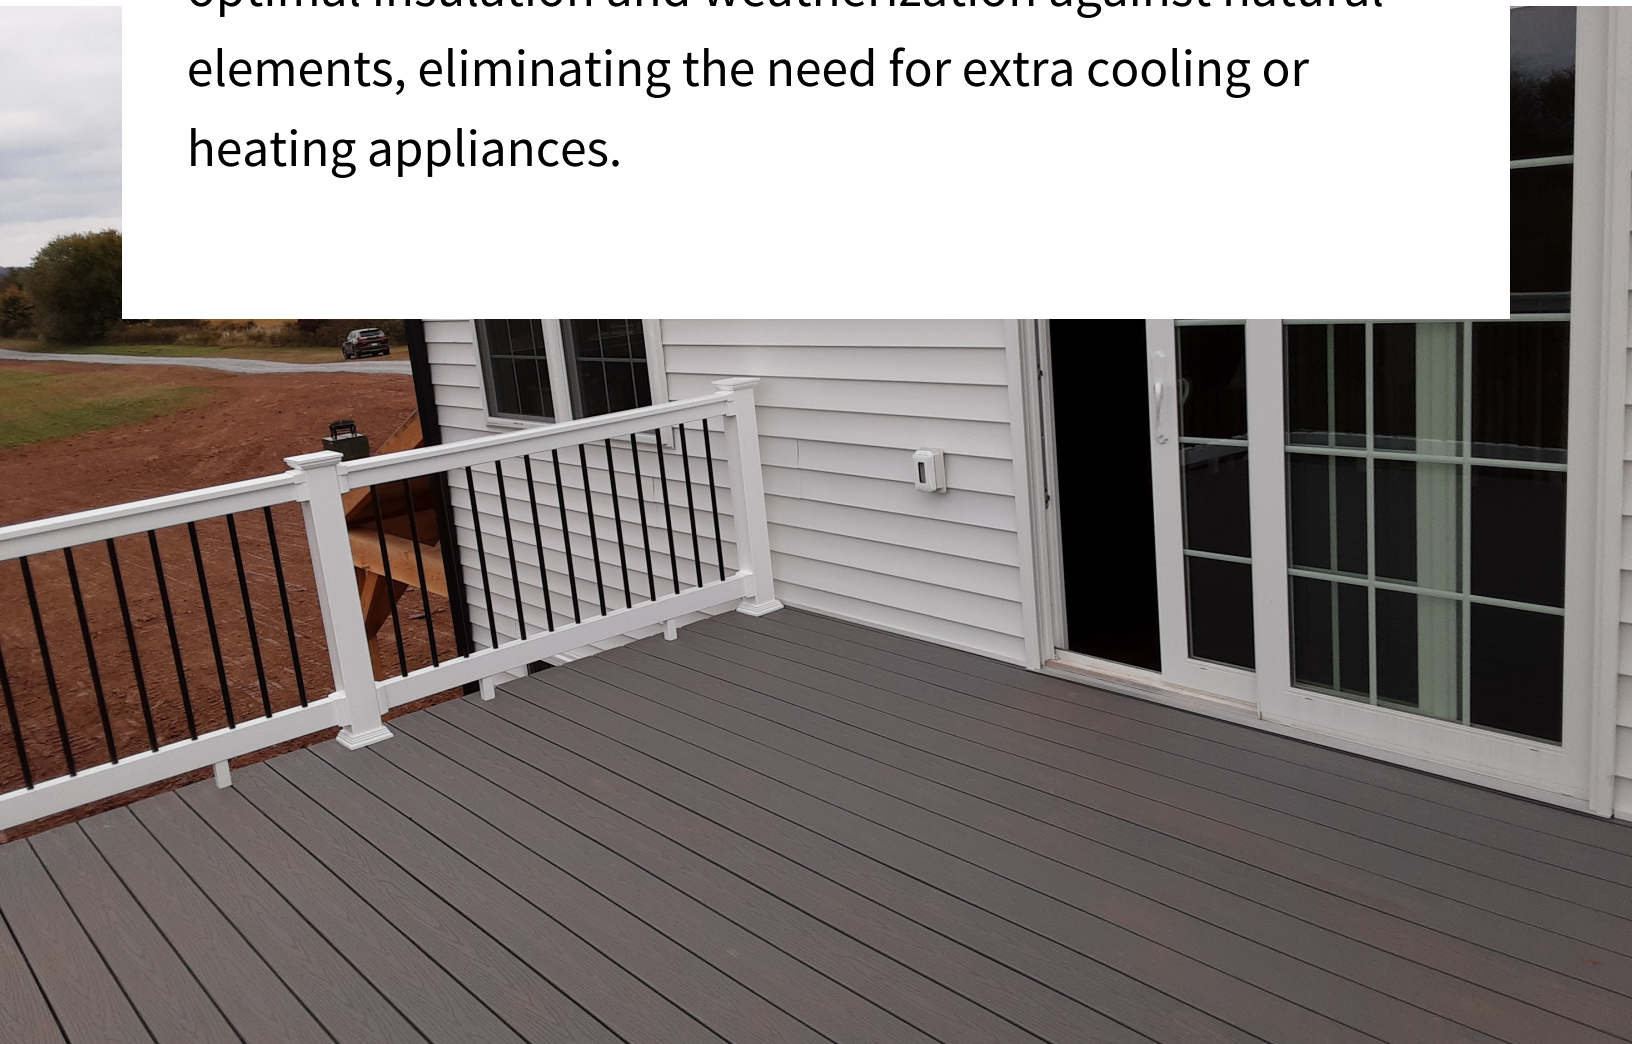

Metal and steel barndominiums require very little upkeep and maintenance. If you want a low-maintenance home that doesn't require constant care, barndominiums are a great choice for you. Forget the continuous updates to paint, siding, repair, and more.

Due to the steel used in barndominiums, these structures are incredibly energy efficient. They offer optimal insulation and weatherization against natural elements, eliminating the need for extra cooling or heating appliances.

Front view

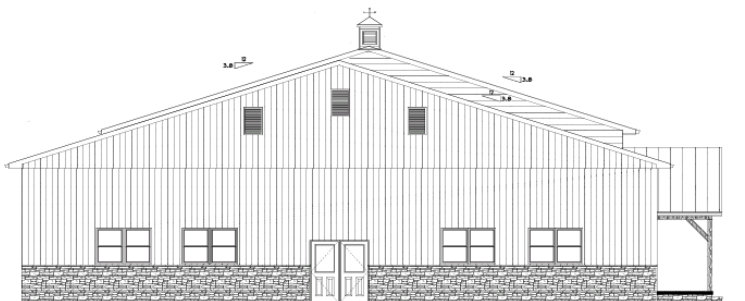

FRONT ELEVATION
SCALE: 3/16" = 1'-0"

Outside elevations

RIGHT ELEVATION
SCALE: 3/16" = 1'-0"

LEFT ELEVATION
SCALE: 3/16" = 1'-0"

REAR ELEVATION
SCALE: 3/16" = 1'-0"

Smooth Barndominium Building Checklist

Every Reputable builder is busy right now – there is a far greater demand for builders, than there are builders to fill needs. This makes the builder's time extremely valuable. Here are some things you can do to make for smooth sailing when Reaching Out to a Contractor.

1. Have a realistic budget.
2. Have a place to build.
3. Have basic floor plans and drawings done before pestering a builder (even if it's just something you drew on grid paper).
4. Determine if you are going to act as your own General Contractor or hire it done.
5. If needed, arrange financing. Not sure where to start? Try here!
6. To obtain a successful and happy outcome, do lots of reading and research & look at your builder's Google profile for customer reviews before you make your final decision.

Let's Chat!

WE CAN HELP.

Talk with our team today at www.jjscustombuilders.com